

Cambridge Score Easy Victor Over Penn and Oxford in Four-Mile Race

Quaker Team Is Ninety Yards Behind Light Blue at Finish

Mountain's Great Sprint on First Leg, When He Outruns Herr, of Penn., Gives Commanding Lead; Stallard Outruns Brown in Fastest Time

LONDON, April 8.—Cambridge fulfilled the prophecies of the experts at the Queen's Club this afternoon when the Light Blue team easily won the four-mile relay race with the University of Pennsylvania and Oxford. Several thousand racing enthusiasts braced the cold, damp weather to watch a dull contest.

There was practically no excitement after the third lap of the first mile, when Stallard's early sprint gave Cambridge the lead, that was maintained to the end. From that moment, the result was never in doubt, and shortly afterward the Americans virtually clinched second place.

The time for the four miles was 18 minutes 7.2 seconds, while the world's record, established in 1913 by a Boston A. A. team, and later equaled by Cornell team, is 17 minutes 51.1 seconds. No one, however, after seeing the saggy track, expected unusual speed.

The best time of the afternoon was turned in by Stallard, of Cambridge, who ran the last mile against Captain Brown, of the Quakers. Stallard was timed in 4:27.2, while Brown, who had the best time of the Americans, was clocked in 4:30.5.

At the start of the starter's pistol, the Cambridge team, consisting of Stallard, Herr, of Pennsylvania, third, and Brown, of Oxford, jumped into the lead. Stallard, who was running the first mile, gave Cambridge a lead of 90 yards at the three-quarter mark. Herr was running the second mile, and Stallard, who was running the third mile, gave Cambridge a lead of 100 yards at the three-quarter mark. Brown was running the fourth mile, and Stallard, who was running the fifth mile, gave Cambridge a lead of 110 yards at the three-quarter mark.

Stallard, running the second leg for Cambridge, increased this advantage to thirty yards, finishing the mile in 4:27.2, while Brown, who was running the third mile, was timed in 4:30.5. Stallard's lead was maintained to the end, and he won the race by a margin of 90 yards.

Stallard was not pressed and appeared content to take things easy, finishing in 4:27.2, nearly ninety yards ahead of the Penn. team. Brown, who was running the third mile, was timed in 4:30.5, and Stallard, who was running the fourth mile, was timed in 4:27.2. Stallard's lead was maintained to the end, and he won the race by a margin of 90 yards.

Lynch Defeats Harry Martin In Slow Bout

Former Champion Is Unimpressive in Victory Over Providence Boy at Rink S.C.

Joe Lynch, former world's bantamweight champion, was awarded the judges' decision over Harry Martin, of Providence, after a somewhat tedious bout of twelve rounds at the Rink Sporting Club last night. Martin had the better of the milking in the early rounds, but Lynch came through in his accustomed fashion and was doing all the fighting in the closing rounds of the fight.

From the sixth round on Lynch battered his New England rival all over the ring with his right and left hands. In the eleventh round, Lynch knocked out two of Martin's teeth.

Lynch was a disappointment and his punches lacked power. He took many blows on the chin, especially in the first few rounds. The former champion weighed 118 and his opponent scaled 115.

John Murray defeated Red Cap Wilson in the twelve-round semi-final after a thrilling battle. The winner was Murray, 135-123, and Wilson, 133-124.

Kid Kaplan easily earned the verdict over Jimmy Martin in a six-round bout.

Continued competition, when not overdue, is the finest of all trainers. It is the one thing needed to keep a man working his way upward. Dempsey, in the last fifteen months, has fought less than twelve minutes. It hasn't been his fault, but destiny doesn't bother with the amount of faults. He has outlasted the field far enough to hurt himself as well as others.

Lack of competition makes even a champion rusty. He can never get the same stuff from training or friendly exhibitions. Between the Johnson battle in 1915 and the Dempsey contest in 1919, Willard boxed just thirty minutes in a real quarrel. And while Willard was resting and rusting Dempsey was busy practicing his profession.

One of the main factors that may bring about Dempsey's defeat, still some time later on, will be lack of competition rather than the greatness of any rival.

The Next in Line
Mathewson, Walsh, Johnson and Alexander were the four great pitchers of the last two decades. Mathewson and Walsh dropped away some time ago, and neither Johnson nor Alexander is at the top of his glory.

"Who," writes L. H. B., "is now held to be the star pitcher of the day, the successor to Johnson and Alexander?"
Over a span of time Carl Mays would carry the leading precincts, although Red Faber and Urban Shocker, not to forget Burleigh Grimes, were close upon his heels last year.

Out of the lot there seems to be none capable of the feat.

Walsh Defeats Johnson and Alexander in Four-Mile Race

winning as many ball games in a year as Matty, Walsh, Johnson and Alexander, who thought nothing of turning in from thirty to forty victories.

Walsh one season reached the terrific total of fifty-five, as we recall the faint and far-away statistics in the case.

The Tidal Wave
"Can you tell me," a reader interjects, "just how many golf courses and golfers were added to the list last year?"

A recent accounting shows approximately 420 new courses built or started in the last twelve months. This doesn't include nearly all the smaller nine-hole affairs which also harbor their share of players.

The same accounting shows that something around 120,000 new players have taken up the game since last April, the greatest percentage of increase among all sports.

There are now something over 3,000 established courses in the country, exclusive of many nine-hole journeys not let listed.

Things are a bit different in Japan. There are now only six or eight courses on the island, where the job of locating one hundred unused acres calls for a discoverer and a scientist combined. A hundred acres in Japan is supposed to represent as many families as a hundred square miles will handle over here.

One enterprising traveler had visions of building Japanese courses until he discovered that land in Japan was $6,000 an acre, or $600,000 worth of soil for an average lay-out.

As for Luck—
Speaking of luck in the game, there is the case of Gourdin, the Harvard double jumper.

Last spring at the intercollegiate he had one jump recorded for twenty-five feet seven inches, when it was discovered that he had left a faint impression less than a quarter of an inch over the mark.

This quarter of an inch cost him over 5 inches above the record he finally made.

It was proof enough, however, that the present record can still be beaten by many inches.

When a certain duffer heard that Walter Hagen had played a shot out of the woods with a right-handed club turned over left handed he decided to quit the game in disgust. "I have been trying ten years," he said, "to learn how to play a right-handed club from the fairway. That left-handed, back-handed stuff out of a deep woods was the last blow. I'm through. Even a duffer can be crowded just so far."

"After all, Willie Hoppe couldn't come back," reports an exchange. Well, he came back within a sixteenth of an inch of the old crown, and that, at least, is in the same vicinity.

Rarest bloom on April's shore.
Once again the old one score.

It is at this point that hope springs eternal in the baseball breast, only to wither and fade around the 17th of May.

Gould Defeats Morgan for National Court Tennis Title

Champion Successfully Defends Honors for 15th Consecutive Time; Challenger Outclassed at Every Angle and Loses in Straight Sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-0

By Jack Masters
Jay Gould, amateur court tennis champion of the world, successfully defended his national title for the fifteenth consecutive time yesterday afternoon, when he defeated Hewitt Morgan, in the challenge round of the tournament at the Racquet and Tennis Club. Gould won in straight sets at 6-2, 6-1, 6-0.

Morgan, who reached the challenge round when he defeated a challenger, was forced to default in the final because of an injury to his shoulder, made a gallant stand against the champion, but fell short by far in his effort to make a close struggle of it. Morgan was outclassed at every angle of the game.

With the exception of the first four games of the opening set, when Morgan held Gould at two all, the challenger never had a set point. Gould's service and ability to place the ball at a low rakish angle into the left corner, where Morgan was compelled to go on a backhand return, were among the deciding factors.

Weissmuller Clips Another Record in Detroit A. C. Swim
DETROIT, April 8.—Johnny Weissmuller, the Illinois Athletic Club star swimmer, clipped another record off his own world's record for the 220-yard free style, in winning the national championship for that distance in the Detroit Athletic Club tank to-night.

Weissmuller won in easy fashion over Ehrlich, D. A. C. and Moore. Norman Ross, expected to start in the event, failed to compete.

The balance of the program constituted a dual meet between the D. A. C. and the Central A. A. U. Diving championship.
